

Is College Worth It?

And How Would You Know?

Choosing a college and how to pay for it is one of the most important decisions people ever make. But for all the money and time at stake, we still can't answer fundamental questions like:

- How do colleges serve different types of students?
- What majors lead to jobs in specific fields?
- Will you be able to repay your student loans?

Young Invincibles is traveling the country working with future and current college students exploring these topics. As education and skills become more crucial in the workforce, we need to start thinking about what we know (and don't know) about college, and how the policy debates impact you.

Join us for an interactive workshop on these important topics and learn how to get involved and make your voice heard!

You or your student group and organization can participate in the conversation by contacting Tom Allison:
tom.allison@younginvincibles.org

With generous support from: