Los Angeles Community Colleges' Accreditation Status Reaffirmed
District commendations include effective use of technology, exemplary internal audit functions, and strong emphasis on continuous quality improvement

The Los Angeles Community College District (LACCD) received formal notice from the Accrediting Commission for Community and Junior Colleges (ACCJC) that eight of its nine colleges received reaffirmation of their accreditation status based on a comprehensive evaluation. One college was issued an accreditation sanction and remains accredited. All nine colleges went through a week-long formal accreditation review process this past March.

LACCD colleges that received reaffirmation are: Los Angeles City College, East Los Angeles College, Los Angeles Harbor College in San Pedro, Los Angeles Mission College in Sylmar, Los Angeles Pierce College in Woodland Hills, Los Angeles Trade-Technical College, Los Angeles Valley College in Valley Glen, and West Los Angeles College in Culver City. Los Angeles Southwest College received a Warning sanction, though it remains open and fully-accredited during the process to address the recommendations. A Warning is issued when the commission finds that a college deviates from the accreditation standards.

"Each of our nine colleges are fully committed to meeting the high standards for institutional performance and view the accrediting process as an opportunity to affirm what is working well and to improve where necessary," said Francisco C. Rodriguez, Ph.D., Chancellor for LACCD. "Our accreditation is fundamental to providing public assurance of quality instruction and support services so our students may pursue and achieve their educational goals. Being accredited also means our students can receive federal financial aid and veteran benefits and be assured their course work will be accepted when they transfer or enter the workforce."

There were a number of commendations noted by the visiting teams at each college ranging from the commitment to student success and sense of community to new, innovative facility designs and resource conservation efforts. The district received commendations including forward-looking efforts in professional development of staff, effective use of technology, excellent internal audit functions and maintaining an environment of continuous quality improvement.

This was an historic event for the district on several fronts: LACCD is the first multi-college district to be reviewed under the new ACCJC standards, this was the first time all nine colleges simultaneously underwent the accreditation reaffirmation process, and the LACCD office was also reviewed comprehensively as part of the process. Ten separate visiting teams consisting of more than 100 community college educators and administrators from throughout California and the Pacific region took part in the accreditation review. ●
